

Human Resources and Finance, Reimagined

A look at how Steelcase's HR and finance teams changed their space, got creative and transformed the way they worked at the Learning + Innovation Center in Munich

 Read 1 minute

In an era of digitalization and rapid disruption, creativity is more important than ever before.

Work is changing fast. As problems become more complex, the shift from process-driven to creative work is essential – especially for traditionally task-oriented teams like human resources and finance.

As Steelcase set out to build its first Learning + Innovation Center in Europe, the question was how do we build a space that unleashes creativity? A space that brings previously regional teams together and fosters innovation. A space that prepares our teams for tomorrow.